Thrilling Snow Shoe Ride of Five HELP AND SITUATIONS WANT-Miners.

THOMAS PARNELL'S RIDE IOWN THE CANYON.

OR dare-devil courage no feat ever performed in Utah exceeds that of the trip down the Little Cottonwood canyon of Thomas Powell and four of his fellow workmen Friday morning. The trip was made on snowshoes, and when it is stated that eight and a half miles were covered in fourteen minutes, some idea of the achievement can be gained.

Powell and his companions were at work in the Albion mine on the divide een the American Fork and the Little Cottonwood. They determined to ome down to the city, and the snow was so deep in the canyon that the only possible way of navigating was on shoes. There was eighteen feet-of snow just in front of their cabin up on the brow of the mountain, and there had been more snowslides in the past month in the canyon than ever before known, and the only reason that there had not been many casualties reported was that the roads were impassable. Thirteen days in February the Albion men could not go outside their cabin, so heavy was the snowfall.

The men knew that they were taking their lives in their hands in starting on such a trip, but they fastened on their shoes and started. Their companions, to the number of a dezen, bade them goodby at the cabin door, hardly expecting to see them again, and thus the start was made. The simple account of that trip, as given by the men themselves, makes the cheek turn Down they dashed over the snow, going faster and faster with each mile traversed. Over the Superior gulch they shot, the gulch in which the awful catastrophe of 1872 was caused by a snowslide. Here the snow is now supposed to be 100 feet deep.

Each man carried a pole to guide him in his mad dash over the gullies and knobs, and it was only by shooting from one side of the canyon to the other that they managed to catch their breath. Rabbits, scared from their coverts, seemed to stand still in their tracks as the miners shot past. By the rarest good fortune the men ran into no obstructions, and not one of them seems to have lost control of himself during the descent. They had no time to think, and did not realize the danger they had passed through till they had succeeded in stopping in the soft snow in the lower part of the canyon, near

The men timed themselves, and from the time of starting to the time they struck the soft snow at the bottom and had time to remove their shoes it was just fourteen minutes, and the distance covered eight and a half miles. No ordinary train in Utah makes faster time than that, and the miracle is that the men escaped without injury.

After removing their shoes, Powell and his companions walked to Sandy and took the train there for this city. They spent Friday and yesterday among friends in Salt Lake, and seemed to be none the worse off for their wild ride down the mountain. Mr. Powell was anxious to see his parents, who are quarantiaed for smallpox in Spanish Fork, and after transacting his business in this city he started yesterday for his home.
